Hi Carty I know i have seen the answer to this question somewhere, but i cannot seem to find it and i have 2 questions anyway.

1 When i upload a new feed on some blogs all i get is a small amount of text on my blog and then a link to the original article.

How can i cure this problem.

2 On my software where it says number of automated posts per day, my window on the software is blanked out. The scheduled post part is clear. How do i cure that problem.

If you can help

Paul

Deal Paul,

That is a setting which you could change in blogger.com' dashboard. To display a full article or break the rest with permalinks to it. Not exactly sure about the page where you set that but you can easily find it in the dashboard.

If your display setting of your PC is not set to the default 96dpi, the fonts get large and overlay onto other controls. Fortunately, it should be the only box that becomes inaccessible and to be frank, that box is useless till now. I thought of using it in future when I make the software 100% automated where it starts on it's own if your PC is on, update all feeds and post the items. Right now I haven't implemented that feature because I want to give you guys a more controlled way of posting as it results in high-quality blogs rather than just plain junk thrown by other tools out there.

So don't worry about that box for now and the schedule interval is what you must focus on. If you want 3 posts per day on your blog, just set the interval as 480 mins (24 hrs x 60 mins / 3 posts per day).

Hope you get my point here?

Regards,
Carty..

Hi Carty thanks you for you quick response, I think when you link back to the original website that you get the feed from causes the problem.

All it seems to produce is a small excerpt of text on your blog. I have taken this off and it produces the complete article.

I may be wrong or I may be right, but it seems to work for me.
