

A Nice Tip for Wordpress Autoblogs

Just wanted to share an extra monetising option with the good folks on the forum here....those who are using Wordpress blogs, anyway.

Its called the Amazon product In Post plug in and it lets you do just that...add an Amazon product right into a post.

What I do, when using ABS, is spot content which mentions specific products and then, visit the blog and add a product to the post by way of a solution.

You can position the product above, in or after the post. There are many more options too. Its very easy to use and takes seconds to configure with a product.

Here is an example:

You need an Amazon affiliate account, obviously.

Here is where you can get the plug in:

Hope this is useful.

Great plug in, but that will be used in substitution for adsense? Do you have a blog where you use Amazon instead of adsense?How much one blog can make per month with Amazon?

I don't think it needs to be used "in place of". It seems you could do both. The adsense all the time and occasionally, when you find a product that fits the niche, use the amazon plugin.

Nice find Barry!

I don't see a problem with this plug in and adsense. This is an extra bite of the cherry, so to speak. I only use it when I spot some grabbed content which has obviously been written to sell something. Then I will either find the particular product referred to in the content or something closely relevant and use this to offer a solution to the customer.

I only just started using it so I have no results of how successful it will be. Also, Amazon commissions suck so it may not make anyone a million, but hey, worth trying and, as it's free, why not?
